Continuous Flow Intersections
FACT SHEET

Continuous Flow Intersections
A continuous flow intersection, or CFI, is an innovative intersection that allows vehicles to travel more efficiently through an intersection. A CFI enhances safety and increases traffic flow through intersections by allowing left-turning traffic and through-traffic to move simultaneously.

Traditional intersections have left-turning traffic in the middle of the road, so through-traffic must wait for those vehicles to turn. A CFI shifts left-turning traffic to the outside edges of the road, which allows through-traffic to move through the middle of an intersection simultaneously, thus increasing the number of vehicles that can make it through the intersection in a single traffic light cycle.

Driving in a Continuous Flow Intersection
Existing CFI’s have proven easy for drivers to understand and navigate. If turning left, mid-block traffic signals allow drivers to shift to the left side of the road to prepare for the left-turn movement. Drivers move through the mid-block traffic signal to the far left side of the road, and then make their left-turn at the main intersection. After proceeding through the intersection, left-turning traffic then returns to driving on the right side of the road.

Through-traffic proceeds as it would in a typical intersection. Right-turning traffic uses the right lane or a right-turn lane, like a typical intersection. In some cases, CFI’s do not allow right turns on red.

Advantages of a Continuous Flow Intersection
A CFI enhances safety and mobility by reducing potential crash points at intersections, and by allowing more cars to move through an intersection. Because a CFI allows for more efficient movement, this type of intersection can reduce delays and travel time. Other benefits of CFI’s include:

- Enhanced safety because of fewer potential crash points
- Improved travel time
- Allows more vehicles to pass through an intersection
- Low cost improvement
- Less right-of-way needed than adding lanes
- Quicker and cheaper to implement, compared with building overpasses or underpasses

Contact Information
For further information, please contact:
Kelli Reyna
Public Information Officer
TxDOT Austin Office
512-832-7060
Kelli.Reyna@txdot.gov