

Public Open House Notice Texas Transportation Plan (TTP) 2050

The Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) will host a second series of open houses to gather public input as part of developing the Texas Transportation Plan (TTP) 2050. TTP 2050 is the State's multi-modal, long-range transportation plan and serves as the guiding policy document to address the state's transportation needs. TTP 2050 will include strategies for the development, construction, and implementation of projects and services for all transportation modes, and information about emerging transportation technology (e.g. self-driving cars) and emergency operations.

TxDOT wants to hear from you as it plans for the future of Texas transportation. Round 1 outreach meetings gathered stakeholders' feedback on statewide goals and objectives, regional priorities and challenges, and transportation behaviors and preferences. For Round 2, TxDOT wants your input on funding choices and how you would invest in improving TxDOT's system performance. Also new for Round 2 is an interactive investments tool and a series of story maps on the Texas rural transportation system, emergency operations, and on the transportation modes that TxDOT plays a role in.

You are invited to come to any of the open houses listed below or visit the virtual open house, which features digital versions of all materials found at the in-person meetings.
